OUR MISSION is to help students understand, welcome, and meet academic challenges. Center faculty focus especially on empowering students to gather law-related information, analyze it, organize it, and use it to communicate effectively in various legal contexts. Through courses, academic-enrichment resources, and bar-preparation offerings, WLRC faculty guide students as they integrate legal theory with professional skills and values, develop a voice, and practice using that voice powerfully as lawyers.

The WLRC pursues its mission primarily through its nationally recognized Research, Reasoning, Writing, and Advocacy (RRWA) Program — ranked 14th by U.S. News & World Report’s “America’s Best Graduate Schools” 2016 edition — and the Academic Excellence Program. RRWA teaches various written and oral modes of professional communication in law. During two intensive semesters, first-year students work in small class sections to develop key skills for legal practice: how to research, analyze, speak, and — above all — write about the law and its effects on clients. In addition, a related set of courses trains a select group of outstanding upper-level students called Honors Writing Scholars, who then work alongside WLRC faculty as instructional mentors.

The WLRC’s Academic Excellence Program serves UNC law students at all levels through courses, workshops, peer tutoring, and individual consultations. Subjects include professionalism, studying, test-taking, and oral communication.

“The WLRC’s programs don’t just teach students how to be successful lawyers; they teach students how to lead fulfilling lives.”

KACI BISHOP, Clinical Associate Professor. A Davis Society graduate of UNC School of Law, Bishop previously clerked at the Court of Appeals of North Carolina, worked at the North Carolina Justice Center, and taught in the school’s Immigration Clinic.

ALEXA CHEW, Clinical Associate Professor. A graduate of Princeton and Duke, Chew came to UNC after working as an associate at a large firm, teaching at Campbell University, and serving as a longtime judicial clerk at the Court of Appeals of North Carolina.

LUKE EVERETT, Clinical Associate Professor. A former high-school teacher with a master’s degree in teaching, Everett also has gleaned wisdom and experience from running a prestigious century-old law firm in Durham, N.C.

PATRICIA FREY, WLRC Business Services Coordinator. Since 2000, Frey has served as the WLRC’s primary welcoming presence, assistant, and wellness consultant. She has more than 40 years of experience and is a certified life coach and yoga instructor who shares with the law school community instruction in gentle yoga and stress management.

RACHEL GURVICH, Clinical Visiting Assistant Professor. A graduate of UNC and Harvard, Gurvich clerked at the U.S. Court of Appeals for the First Circuit and practiced at a major international law firm, focusing on intellectual property and appellate litigation. She also served as a Special Assistant District Attorney and taught as an adjunct at Boston College Law School.

O.J. SALINAS, Clinical Associate Professor. A native of South Texas, Salinas previously practiced civil litigation, earned a master’s in counseling, and taught law-related courses to undergraduates and master’s students. He has special expertise in academic counseling at the undergraduate and law-school levels.
