Visiting Scholars/Researchers Program Agreement Form

Every year, Carolina Law welcomes a limited number of visitors from around the world. The program is designed to give an opportunity to foreign academics or law professionals to pursue their research interest and consult with UNC faculty.

No compensation is provided to the visitors and they are not eligible for employee benefits or financial aid. The visitors are granted full access to the Katherine R. Everett Law Library and may be able to audit classes with the permission of the instructors. Typically, space restraints limit the possibility of providing office space to Visiting Scholars and Researchers, however, a library carrel space is provided. Additionally, Scholars are issued a UNC One Card and a PID#, which allows them to use most facilities at the University. In addition, Visiting Scholars are provided planning coordination and sometimes transportation to events such as court observations, lectures, and meetings; along with the provision of Westlaw and Lexis/Nexis access and passwords for use in research; and 24/7 law school building access. Visiting Scholars and Researchers must make their own travel and housing arrangements, however, UNC and UNC School of Law will assist in obtaining the proper travel visa and other official arrangements for the stay.

It is recommended that Visiting Scholars/Researchers review the Carolina Law web site to determine the ways in which they may be enriched by their time at UNC. Information about course offerings, special events, and faculty may be found on the Carolina Law web site.

Fee for Visiting Scholars/Researchers
The fee for Visiting Scholars/Researchers is $3000 per semester ($6000 for the academic year). The fee is to be paid soon after arrival to the Director of International Programs, UNC School of Law. In cases where the length of stay will be less than a semester or year, the fee will be prorated. Payment may be made by personal check, credit card, travelers checks, or cash.

Agreement:

I, the undersigned Visiting Scholar/Researcher at UNC School of Law, agree to pay the established semester fee to UNC School of Law, as set forth by the International Programs unit, according to the length of my research stay.
